About Me

I left my hometown in Cornwall, UK in 2012 on a mission to walk across Europe, from the UK to Istanbul. One year later I had done just that, and amassed a blog full of stories and memories of the people and places I encountered along the way. The captivating city of Istanbul soon became my new home and I set about exploring it from top to bottom, developing my travel writing with blogs and articles for local websites. Whenever I have the opportunity I now continue my travels by bicycle and work exchange volunteering, through Turkey, Central Asia and beyond. When I am not busy pedalling on the road, I contribute freelance articles and blogs to various websites, guidebooks and publications.
